■ The sophistication of this guest bath in a Sconset summer house stems from luxurious materials and thoughtful details such as mirrors behind glass shelving to reflect light, recessed panel wainscoting, framed antique French scenes, and dots of diamond glass tiles in the Katni marble floor. Lined with clear glass subway tiles and mosaics, the luxurious shower is outfitted with his and hers rain heads, body jets, and steam.

■ Achieving a peaceful mood was paramount in the design of this South Coast master bath. The homeowners—Arthur Golden, known for his best-selling novel Memoirs of a Geisha, and his wife Trudy—desired a place where they could escape and unwind. To escape any “flashy” elements, the shower was constructed without an accompanying curtain or glass partition, and the matte tile was selected for its serene, natural green hue.
